HYMN OF THE EASTH.

My heart has pulsed like their own, I am their Mother, and my weins. Though built of the enduring stone. Thrill as do theirs with godike pain

Seas of green the pastures lie, Ocean blue the boundless sky, Bods unfolding, birds and flowers. Reautiful, this world of ours; This, the message nature brings, This, the song the robin sings. "Youth undying. Time defying. Out of death, sternal, springs."

Youth triumphant, youth eternal Smiles above the meadows veroal, Wandering nethyrs breathe and play O'er the flowery fields of May: Nodding blossems one by one Whaper to the glowing sun, "Life immortal, Death, the portal, Youth and God and love are one."

Singing bird and fragrant flower, Grassy mead and leafy bower, Morning mists that slewly rise. Starry depths of evening skles— Heaven and earth with beauty fill, Like a song of triumph thrill; "Nature's story Clothed in Glory Holds our hearts enraptured still."

Look and listen day by day,
This, the message of the May.
Plotured in each forest glade,
Written in each grassy blade,
Heard, when shades of evening fall,
In the feathered songater's call:
"Power unending,
Love transcending,
Beauty blanding throughout all."

Geauty blending throughout all."
